A note of thanks...

If you drive by the Village of Hilton sign located on South Avenue, you will notice how beautifully landscaped this area is! For many years, Donna LaForce has decorated this space, most recently with flowers and a replica of the Village gazebo. Thank you, Donna, for going above and beyond for the community!

Traffic Alert

Recently on-street parking has become an issue. Please be mindful of your neighbors, school buses, mail carriers and utility workers. Areas of most concern are cul-de-sacs, please do not block public streets with your vehicles. The flow of traffic must not be impeded. If you have a concern with parking, please call 911 for enforcement.

Parma Special Police

You may have noticed the Parma Special Police directing traffic at various community events. This team of ten officers was created to support the Village of Hilton, Town of Parma, Hilton Parma Fire District and the Hilton Central School District. Each member is required to complete 300 hours of training at the Monroe County Public Safety Training Center. A fully equipped vehicle formerly used by the Monroe County Sheriff's Department was donated for their use; a great example of communities sharing services.

Miracle on the Hudson Survivor Dan Vinton Speaks in Hilton

Written by Nancy Leport

"Always listen to your flight attendants", was the advice Hilton Alumni Dan Vinton gave to an audience of almost 200 people in the High School Auditorium, July 20, on his experience as a survivor of the Miracle on the Hudson. Dan was in town for his class reunion; and through the efforts of the Parma Hilton Historical Society and the Hilton Alumni Association, it was arranged for him to give a program about that fateful day when a flock of geese hit the engine on takeoff. Fortunately, Captain Sully Sullenberger miraculously landed flight 1549 on the Hudson, and I am sure you remember the picture of all the passengers standing on the wing of the floating plane.

Dan's recounting of his experience filled the auditorium with video, audio and pictures of how he and the other 157 souls on that flight survived the landing in the frigid Hudson River that January afternoon. He readily gave credit to the Captain, crew and his fellow passengers. No lives were lost that day and he said everyone worked together to make sure everyone survived. Dan relayed how he slipped off the icy wing into the cold water of the Hudson and though he was able to swim back to the wing he couldn't get a grip to hoist himself up. Suddenly, he recalled, two arms were pulling him up out of the water and back onto the wing. He recounted numerous examples of how his fellow passengers took care of each other and saved lives.

Dan said it changed his life. He changed careers, became intentional about helping others and giving back to his community of Charlotte, NC where he lives. He and the other passengers have stayed in touch and have had reunions with Captain Sully. When asked if the movie was true to the experience, he replied there were parts that were fiction but for the most part it captured it well. Passengers from the flight were even offered parts as extras...an offer Dan accepted.

And, yes, he still flies but said he burst into tears on takeoff during the flight home the next day, but since then he listens to the flight attendants and reads the brochures on every flight. We should too he warned us -- it could save your life.
